About Joyce

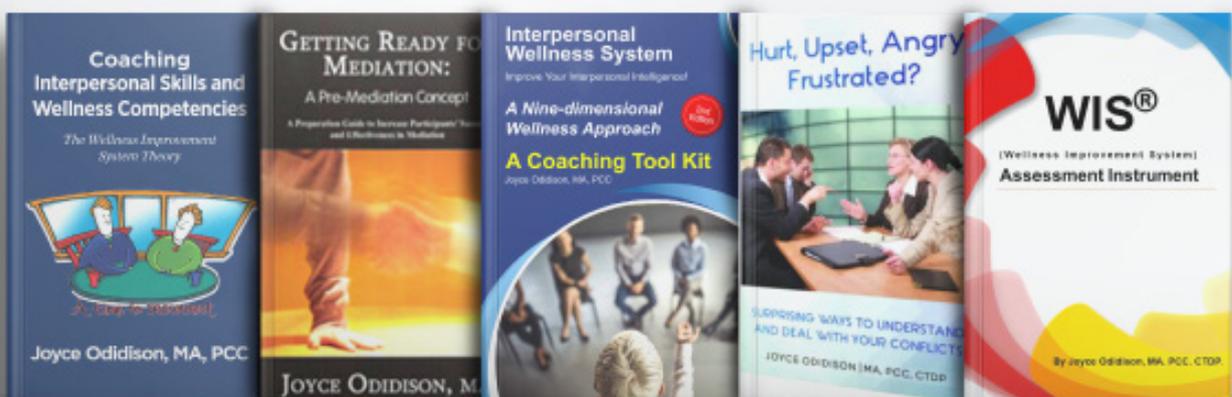

Joyce Odidison is a Conflict Analyst, Speaker, Author, Coach, thought leader, and the world's leading expert on Interpersonal Wellness Competency Teaching. Joyce is the President of Interpersonal Wellness Services Inc. (IWS), an organizational development training and coaching firm, that provides workplace wellness education and hosts the annual Global Workplace Wellness Summit to promote diversity inclusion, resilience, mental wellness, emotional health, and psychological safety at work.

A key initiative for Joyce at IWS was to create and lead Coach Velocity School of Coaching, which is the only black-owned and led coach training school, offering the Wellness Competency Mindset Coaching curriculum since 2006.

Joyce is a C-Suite level workplace wellness expert working with governments, private sector, non-profits, and post-secondary institutions struggling with difficult work relationships, diversity and inclusion conflicts, discrimination, bullying, harassment, or other stressful interpersonal situations.

Joyce is an expert in her field, author of five books, a keynote speaker, and corporate trainer. Joyce is also a frequent TV guest expert who has been featured in print and online magazines around the world. Joyce is also host of the What's Happening at Work podcast show.
